Dumesnil & Co. also cashed a draft or Ingles at the same time, which proved to be a

> Last week Dumesnil & Co. received a letter from the Police office of Chicago, in which was expressed the belief that Norton was then in that city, and asking for instructions. They entertained doubts as to the genuineness of the letter, supposing that it might have been written by Norton himself to obtain the signature of the tirm for the purpose of forgery. The letter was shown to Snoddy, who consulted Officer Bligh and Mr. Ehrick, Clerk of the Police, on the subject. On comparing the letter with the signature of Norton, made on a hotel register, which Bligh lead in his possession, there seemed to be some similarity in the chirography, and it was concluded that Bligh should go to Chicago forthwith.

It appears that Captain Kennedy, of the Chicago police, lately received a letter from Jas Caldwell, of New York, who is a hrother-in-law of Ingles, asking him to collect a debt of the latter, who was flourishing in that city as a grain specustor. As a means of coercing payment, Kennedy was requested to hint that he knew of the forger's rascalities in Louisville and Cincinnati. Kenuedy ound him after considerable trouble, and gave in to understand he was under arrest if the debt was not liquidated forthwith. He said he had no money, but he had a receipt from an Express Company for a Louisville & Nashville R. R. show bond which he was expecting, and he would deposit it as collateral until it could be sold. This he mentioned to Bligh on his arrival which convinced the Louisville officer he was the chap whose presence justice demanded here for swindling Snoddy of that identical bond and oth-

Thursday the forger called at the police office Chicago, by arrangement with Kennedy, in relation to the sale of the bond, but, as the officer said he had heard nothing yet as to its value ngles said he would call again. Bligh tracked im to his hotel, and fearing he might give him he slip, arrested him. When informed of the charge against him, he said, "I guess I can satis you that I am not the man;" but subsequently wned up. Capt. Keunedy and Bligh brought im here last night. He is from Brooklyn, N. ., where he is respectably connected. Ingles and but $27 left out of the many thousands be brained by forgeries in this and other cities witha the past year. Mr. Snoddy agreed to pay Bligh $500 for his arrest.

The Oppositionists I . vided. The Frankfort Commonwealth opposes the suggestion of the Louisville Journal and other Opposition organs, of Tom Corwin for the Speakship of the next national House of Representaives. This is a family quarrel, with which we, of course, will take no part. We will remark, however, that the article in the Commonwealth is well considered, and no doubt reflects the sentiments of the Opositionists of Kentucky. It, however, looks rather bad for a party like the Opposition which boasts its unity and harmony, to permi itself to be divided by minor considerations; and then the Opposition is decidedly too small a party to be divided. It will do very we'll for the Democracy to disagree on international points. or, even though divided, we can heat our oppo ents; hut, for the diminutive Opposition concern to be split up, is really shameful.

OPERA-LAST NIGHT .- We regret to announce that to-night is to be the last performance at cresent of the Cooper Troupe. There is no doubt but that an engagement of two weeks more | sid would have been much more prolitable than that night is sufficient evidence that their popularit is on the increase, and we are that the public wish them to remain -Fo-night they perform "Il Troystore, one of the most attractive of their list of Operas, and one which will certainly insure them a croy d ed house at parting. We have never known a medicine that so uddenly and universally took the country by storiu as Dr. John Bull's Vegetable Worm Destroyer has done, and we can add from experi ence that it fully deserves its wide-spread popu larily. Pleasaut to the palate, beautiful to the eye, and a prompt and certain remedy for werms, it is not surprising that the Doctor can hardly keep pace with the demand for it.

BELZEBUB CAGED .-- A young man named Isaiah Hamilton, better known as Beizebub, who has ong been a terror to Jeffersonville, was arrested n Monday last for disorderly conduct, and in lefault of paying a fine and costs, amounting to $40, was sent to the Charlestown jail. This man outchered a coal boatman on a steamboat last year, but escaped by some means. He was also one of the moh on "Bloody Monday," in 1855.

To-night is the last night of Sanford & nith's burlesque opera troupe at Histrionic Hall, Jellerson street, near Third. Lovers of fun good music, and singing, should not miss this their last opportunity of witnessing the above troupe in their different roles. According to report, for some time past she has been receiving the attentions of a very courteous and obliging merchant of St. Louis, who, it is said, is a very Don Juan of a fellow. They have frequently been seen together taking monolight strolls through the city, and it is supposed that under the benign influence of the quiet stars, the couple pledged to one another their undying nonsense, and the female in the case resolved to cut asunder the ties which bound her to Ethiopian minstrelsy, as represented in Mr. Ed-wards, and enjoy the loving embraces of a para-mour. What Lord Palmerston Thinks of the Condition of Mexico.

[From the London Post August 9.]

The condition of Mexico for several years past has been a scandal and disgrace to the civilized world. If we are asked for proof of this assertion, we have only to refer to those gross and infameus outrages upon life and property which have marred the successes of the various chieftans who in that country have obtained the temporary possession of power. So long as violence was confined to Mexican subjects neither England, France, Spain, nor the United States had the slightest right or exense to interfere. But the citizens of all these Powers have been exposed to rather better than you will lear up an exercise. tizens of all these Powers have been exposed to tist church, corner of Fourth and Walnut, on Sahhath morning, 25th inst., at half-past 10, and under the pain of instant death, have been exacted; and the flag of England has given no protect on to British subjects resident within the republic. Treasure destined for exportation has been seized in transitu, and, as a necessary consequence, the payment of the foreign debt of Mexico has been rendered a measure of in bility. In the presence of these facts the English and United States Ministers have agreed to diller. Mr. Olaway and Mr. McLane can not concur in any common course of policy, and the British Government, with that spirit of fair play which must be considered most satisfactory by the United States Cubing. y the United States Cabinet, has determined to astitute an inquiry into the conduct of its repre-entative, Mr. Otway. All the four Powers have sentative, Mr. Otway. All the four rowers have for some time had squadrons on the Mexican coast, but no effectual reparation has been obtained. We can easily understand that system of mutual check which an exhibition of separate naval forces may present. The government of the United States has tried diplomacy; and, if the intelligence received by the last American mail he intelligence received by the last American mail he correct, Mexico from one end to the other will speedily he as much au integral portion of the great Northern Republic as Texas and California. We hear that a treaty has been concluded between the United States and Mexico which gives to the former a right of way "between the Rio Grande and the ports of the Gulf of California, with guarantees for their protection and safety." This article is no doubt intended to facilitate the construction of the islinoad, the line of which an American expedition three years ago surveyed. American expedition three years ago surveyed and proved to be easily feasible. Next, "the right of way and valuable privileges of trunare secured to the American company hold-the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. We do not rrel with the Cabinet at Washington for obtaining means of communication across the con-tinent of North America, which will largely tend to develope the military power and the commer-cial prosperity of the United States. But the American government has secured "the right of transporting troops and munitions of war over such routes, and to send troops to protect them in default of Mexico fulfilling that duty." This amounts to the right of direct military interven-tion; but this right is even more indirectly emthat by another treaty the United States may exercise "a protectorate over Mexico." Considering the state of rapine and violence which the treaty the Lagrangian considering the state of rapine and violence which the treathers multipred to give in the republic has too long been suffered to exist in the republi has too long been suffered to exist in the republic, the pretectorate of the United States is perhaps the best and most natural solution which can be suggested of a most difficult complication.—But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that of the foreign debt of Mexico eight millions out of ten are held by British subjects. If, by the convenient and peaceable process which this treaty provides, Mexico is destined to fall under the protection of the United States—the first step to ritual appropriate the Brite what the protection of the United States—the first step to ritual appropriate the Brite what the state of the United States will the Brite. r rtual aunceation—what guarantee will the Brit-sh holders of the Mexican deht have that the dectrine of repudiation will not be disagreeably and unjustly extended from the North to the far South? On political and social ground we think hat Mexico, as a portion of the United States, rould offer a more safe and valuable field for Brit-sh commerce than in its present chronic condition of violence, revolution and lawlessness. But her ajesty's ministers will neglect the interests of he capitalists of this country, and at the same time fully admit the Mouroe doctrine, if they perant the Government of the United States to have its own way with respect to the future political or-ganization of Mexico. If we consider monetary

d commercial interests, the people of this counand continercial interests, the people of this country have more direct and immediate concern with Mexico than with Italy. Fortunately the question has not fallen into the natically incompetent hands of Lord Fleho who wishes, with respect to Italy, to substitute, for the responsibility of the executive a vote of the House of Commons, which must me every case and wholly universary. at present be premature and wholly unnecessary. We trust that the Mexican bondholders will make their case heard, and require the government not to concur in any American protectorate over the republic of Mox.co until the foreign debt, in which they are so deeply interested, has been ful-in Jefferson county, I have discovered large quan-tities of silicified wood, hearing cust and west, through sections 16 and 17, township 3, range 13, and it will doubtless be found in a corresponding of west and north of east of these tracts. Of this remarkable formation I shall give further notice n my next report. I desire to take this occasion however, to call more particularly the attention of the citizens who may reside along the range of country to the associates which chemistry indi was once largely composed of "carbon." T carbon is now more or less removed and its pl h s replacement of carbon with silex heen that he vegetable fibre retains its original structure and do ms so perfectly that the lossil wood, at a few yards distance, may be readily mistaken for wood unaltered in external appearance, except that produced by ordinary partial decay, although now hard enough to strike fire with steel.

Now it is during such a slow and gradual pro-ess of mineral metamorphism or transfer of car-ion from the vegetable cell that the element is ikely to assume its crystaline form; in other words, to produce diamond, this mineral heing, in fact, the pure crystaline, native form of carbon the combustible principle of charcoal.)

By this process of reasoning we arrive at the conclusion that there is a possibility of finding diamonds along the range of silicitied wood, and it would be well for those residing in the viciuity of this formation to be alive to this fact and look out for them. If they occur in this district them are next likely to be discovered in the arrive adamantine lustre, exceeding hardness, as well as crystaliue form, will serve to distinguish them from limpid quartz, with which they are often confounded.

Negro Excitement in Hopkins County, Ky.

MADISONVILLE, KY., Aug., 22, 1559. Editors Louisville Courier: This morning John B. Frost, P. M. Robinson and others of this place, received a letter from a gentleman at Green-ville, which has created some excitement here. The gentleman, Mr. T. P. Boggess, informs us hat he has information, upon which he can re-y, that there is in existence a concerted plan up-on the part of the slaves of this community, to nake their escape to Canada on the night of the 5th of Sept. They are to be led by a free negro n this county. This letter, taken in connection with the recent conduct of our negro population, has created no small degree of feeling among our leading citizens.

A meeting was held this morning, but no action was taken, more than to appoint a committee, consisting of Messrs. Bradley, Frost, Mitchell, Lyon and Lowe, to report to a general meeting at the court house, ou Saturday, such measures as may be deemed necessary in the premises. The general opinion is, that several free negro deus n and about town will be broken up.

Free icable, to pass such laws as may prevent master. from permitting their slaves to go to elections, and to public political speakings, and, especially, ought free negro meetings to be prohibited. In fact, there are a great many regulations necessary among our slave population. All our jails in this section are full of runaways. M. C. G.

IN BED WITH A HEDGE Hog. -Strange hed fel lows are not always welcome, but here is an ac count of the strangest of bed-lellows. The fac is very personal, and comes from Kendall in the "Old Country." A few nights ago, after J. Mr and procured a light to see what the atrange visitor could he, when, to his surprise, it turned out to he a large hedge hog, which jumped off the bed and took refuge under a chest of drawers. that is intercouse between family and family—I judge that there is comparatively little here; between Mormons and Gentiles or strangers, of course less. Their religious services are much like those that may be shared or witnessed in the churches of most of our popular acts; the music rather better than you will hear in an average worshiping assemblage in the States; the prayers pertinent and full of unction; the sermons adapted to tastes or needs different from mine. They seemed to me rambling, dogmatic, and ill digesteemed to me rambling, dogmatic, and ill digest-

The discourses to which I listened were hoth intensely and exclusively Mormon. That is, they assumed that the Mirmons were God's peculiar, chosen, beloved people, and that all the rest of mankind are out of the ark of safety and flound-ering in beathen darkness. That Jesus Christ is shout to reappear on the earth in all the pomp and splendor of a mighty conquerer—that he will then proceed to take vengence on his enemies mankind in general, whether brethen or nomially Christiau) and to glorify his elect (the Later Day Saints or Mormons), were treated by the abernacie preachers as propositions too selfrident to need demonstration. Having thus hastised his enemies and "gathered his elect om the four winds of heaven," the Saviour is reign over them here on earth for a thouse cents; at the end of which period, they are together to be transferred to heaven. Of course, I ad heard the like of this hefore, but it always had heard the like of this neigre, but it always seems to me a very gross and wooden perversion of the magnificent imagery whereby the Bible foreshadows great spiritual transformations. But the spirit of the Mormon religion appears

o me Judaic rather than Christian; and I readily selieve that lleher kimball, or at any rate one of the great lights in the Church, once said in conersatian with a trentile-"I do pray for my es; I pray that they may all go to hell." Neither on the Julpit nor elsewhere have I heard from a dormon one sponlaneous, hearty recognition che cssential hrotherhood of the entire human one generous prayer for the enlightenment nd salvation of all mankind. On the other hand have been distinctly given to understand that my interlocutors expect to sit on thrones and to car rule over multitudes in the approaching ingdom of tool. In fact, one sincere, devout an has to day assigned that to me as a reason prolygamy; he wants to quality himself, and by ing a large and diversified lamily here, for right far better devote a few years to pondering thrist's saving to this ellect: "He who would be east in the kingdom of Heaven, the same shall be greatest." I was undeceived with regard to the Book of Mormon. I had understood that it is now virtually discarded, or at least neglected, by the Phurch in its services and unnistrations. But Elder Prait gavelus a synopsis of its contents, and treated it throughout as of eipal authority and importance with the Old and New Testament. lle did not read from it, however, but from Malachi, and quoted text after text from the Prophets, which he cited as repredictions of the writing and

The Parisbes were apostles; had hey been allowed to pursue their journey to the States, they would have met many Saints coming

The Arkansas emigrants had in some way abnored the Saints, or inteposed obstacles to the progress of God's work, and they were consequently given over to destruction. Far he it from me to hint that one ifith, one tenth, one twentieth of the Mormons ever hore any part in these bloody deeds, or even know to this day that they were perpetrated. The great body of the Saints undoubtedly believe all the current imputations of Mormon homicides and outrage to be aboninable calumnies. Many of the highest dignitaries of the any act done in behalf of God's kingdom—that is, of the Mormon Church.

I ask, then, the advocates of popular sovereignty in the Territories to say what they propose to do in the premises. How do they intend to adapt their principle to the existing state of facts? They have superseded Brigham Young, with a full knowledge that at least nine-tenths of the people of Ltah earnestly desire his retention as Governor. They have sent hither a batch of Judges who would lke to earn their salaries, but the Mormon Legia aure devotes its sessions principally to the Legislature devotes its sessions principally to the work of crippling and fettering these judges, so that they shall remain here as dummies or be driven into resignation. The r juries are all drawn for them by Mormon officials, under regulations which virtually exclude all but Mormons from each panel; it is a violation of the laws of Utah to of the United States—but the Courts of Utah, so that even the Dred Scott decision could not lawfully be cited here in a fugitive slave case; in short, the Federal Judiciary, the Federal Executive, and the Federal Aimy, as now existing in Utah, are three transparent shams—three egregorious farces; they are costing the Treasury very large sums to no purpose; and the sooner the Governor, Marshal, Judges, &c., resign, and the army is withdrawn, the better for all but a handful of contractors. Popular sovereignty has such full contractors. Popular sovereignty has such full sway here that Brigham Young carries the Territory in his hreeches pocket without a shadow of pposition; he governs without responsibility to either law or public opinion; for there is no real power here hut that of "the Church," and he is practically the Church.

The church is rich, and is honry increasing in wealth; the church settles all civil controversies which elsewhere cause lawants; the church spends which elsewhere cause lawaiits, the chirch spends fittle or nothing, yet rules everything; while the Federal Government, though spending two or three millious per annum here, and keeping up a tussy parade of authority, is powerless and despised. If, then, we are to have "popular sovereignty" in the Territories, let us have it pure and without shams. Let Brigham be reappointed Governor, withdraw the present Federal office holders and army, open shorter and better roads. holders and army, open shorter and better roads to California through the country north of Bridger, and notify the emigrants that, if they choose pass through Utah, they will do so at their own elves—it is worth very little to others—but re-uce its area by cutting off Carson Valley on the ne side and making a Rocky Mountain Territory on the other, and then let them go on their way rejoicing. I believe this is not only by far the cheapest but the safest and best mode of dealing with the difficulties already developed and daily developing here, unless the notion of "Popular Sovereignty" in the Territories is to be utterly exploded and given up. "Popular Sovereignty" in Territory is a contradiction of terms; but "Popular Sovereignty". nlar Sovereignty" in a Territory, backed by a thon-sand sharp Federal bayonets and a battery of flying artillery, is too monstrous a futility, too trans parent a swindle, to he much longer upteld or tol

It is practical Abolitionism, worthy of your man Corwin, and we will have nothing to do with it in connection with such an office as Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Louisville Manufactures .

COTTON FACTORS.

Years since there were two large colton mills in the city, doing a large annual business. These were destroyed by fire, and owing to the want of capital by those whose fortunes were wrecked by the fires, they were never rebuilt. Speculators could not be found to risk money in the manufacture of such a fluctuating article as cottons, and practical men were hard to find who combined the possession of wealth with the knowledge and capacity to mauage an establishment of the kind. There are now but two small factories for the manufacture of cotton, and these two combined do not work more than 500 bales per annum .-But when the South perceives the necessity which we have previously argued of the establishment of cotton mills, Louisville will become one of the points to which practical men will turn. The cheapness of real estate, of building materials, of fuel, and labor, the free and unobstructed access which we have to the Northern, and soon will have to the Southern markets, the immense water power which we possess, make our city one of the most favorable, as a manufacturing point, in the Union. The cotton factors now working in this city are engaged in making batting and corking for the decks of steamboats. They also overhaul and repair upholsters' work. They employ about fifteen hands, have a capital of about $10,000, and do : business of about $25,000. They are not engaged in working cotton of their own, but such as is shipped to them to be worked into batting and corking for others. The cotton workers are:

A Worn to the Wise .- The people are aware that I). O'Hare, No. 427 Main street, is the oldest, largest, and most experienced manufacturer of trunks and similar articles in the city. They should avail themselves of the rare opportunities afforded by Mr. O'Hare. To the country and city merchants he offers peculiar advantages in his wholesale department, while in the retail line he cannot be equalicd. Whoever wants to travel, whether with a small corpet bag or a mammeth trunk, need go no further than the great Western factory of Mr. O'liare. His manufactory is a credit to Louisville, and should meet with extensive patronago. As a matter of home pride, and to subserve economy, purchasers will consult their best interest in purchasing of Mr. D. O'Hare. Remember, that the United Stales Prize Medal was awarded to D. # THIRD STHEET, BETWEEN MAIN AND THE RIVER LOUISVILLE, RY.,

MARIAN DEAN'S STORY. It was many years ago that Mr. Carrington Bates came to town to teach a singing school. He was very good looking, I believe, at least peo-ple said he was, but I hated him, and with such good cause, that I never dare trust myself to tell what I thought of him. He came so well recom-mended by a long list of "reverends" and "honorables." and made such a fine appearance-se gentlemanly and respectable—that every door was open to him, and every one had a word of praise lle played the violin, and sang di vinely, which was enough to set all the sentimen-tal and musical part of the young people halt cra-ry over him. As he had a melancholy air, and a story was soon trumped up that he had been crossed in love, of course all the women were in his favor, and he soon had a list of pupils and patrops that quite astonished the neople themselves. He bore all his honors meekly and well, takin their attentions as a matter of course, being noth ing more than he deserved, but in return for them he would be generous enough to teach them twice a week for a consideration. So it was decided that every Tuesday and Friday night the village church should be lighted and warmed for him, and on other nights he was supposed to be engaged in adjoining towns.

This talk of the singing-school and the teacher had floated by me, and over my head, for I thought it was not meant for me until I heard that Philip Southey's name was on the list of pupils. Then I watched Mr. Carrington Bates as he roue down through the long lane-like street that passed the old farm house where I lived, and wondered what a singing school would be like, for I was sure I should go if Philip and. We were not engaged watched Mr. Carrington Bates as he rode down Philip and I, at least, not formally, but it was somehow understood that I was to be mistress of the log-house he was building on his little farm. The larm was all pa d for now, which accounted for his extravagance in attending singing-school. I was glad of it in my heart, for there was no in sic so dear to me as his voice, all untrained as was; and as he always taught me the tunes h caught up from others. I was as sure I should go asif I had seen my name, Marian, beside his; ju as he cut them on the bark of the old maple the hung over the spring in Mr. Hean's orchard.

I was an orphan bound-girl-hound to Mr. Dean when quite a child-bound by ties of love and gratitude, as well as by law. They had no chiltren living, and I was brought up as their own child. I believe they did everything for me they could, and, as they thought, for the best; but a child living alone with two old people must necessarriy be, and feel, unlike other children. As I grew up those feelings kept pace with my years, and I felt sometimes as though I had never been voung. Among others of my age I felt alone, for I could not understand them - only I'hilip Southey, with his great, kindly heart, and bright, honest face, where one could see his thoughts in his clear eyes. He came to be to me the type of everything good and desirable in this world; and who sha plame me if in my thoughts I gave him a place ip did come just as I knew he would, and e I was to go with him to the singingschool. Mother Dean looked up at me from unde er spectacles when he told n.e, and said, sin In my day a young man would ask a girl to Father Dean patted me on the head and said: Bless her heart, we shall have her singing like the birds, shan't we. Phil?' Philip said:

"The birds are good in their kind, and Marian's singing is good in its way now—pleasant to my ear's always, but I don't believe it is perfect, for all that, and if the teacher fulfills half his promises, ne'i, help us to get a hitle nearer periection So it was settled that we should attend the sing-ing school. In what seemed to me the great crowd of singers, I should have fell emberrassed and afraid if Philip had not sat just across the male where he could give me an encouraging, pleasant look now and then. I'll sive Mr. Bates eredit for being a good teacher, and nothing was heard in the town but the talk of his sayings and

Alter two or turee scho is there was a sudden change in the conversation. A drover, named Barnard, while riding along a lonely road in the north part the of town, was knocked from his horse and robbed, and now lay ill at a farm house near. Of course all the country was horringd, and full of llving rumors. Every one had their equinon, and irst and foremest in avowing his, was Mr. Bates. t was some one in town, he said, or implied, in It was some one in town, he said, or implied, to as many ways, and as many times as he possibly could; and as it was a light evening probably Mr Barnard could describe him, or, at least, recognize

Ose night Philip was gone to an adjoining town, but promised to meet me at the singing school and take me home if my father would fetch me I'hilip did not come even at the intermission, and as I sat turning over the leaves of a sing ng-book, and listening to the merry aughter of a group that surrounded the teacher. a young man, who did not belong to the school, came in and spike a few words to him. There were harried exclamations, a few quick glances at me, then the news, what ver it was, seemed to ound the lights under the black-board to look at some small object which the teacher held in his hand. I went up to bim, and, touching his ain, asked what it was. He held a small coin up to the light and said, as he looked steadily in my

"A counterfeit quart r that was taken from Mr. Barnard by the robber. "The robber who had it"

"Philip Southey, and he is in jail now. He did not get off as he intended." All eyes were fixed on my face, but I was so that my prile came to my aid, and I said "I don't believe it "

Some said "shame." and Mr. Bates said with an offended air, if I doubted his word I might go and ask the shoriff. I walked back to my seat and sat bolt upright, staring at the chalk noise on the black-board. It was all a farce, a mistake, I felt, and would be explained to merrow. There must have been some strange look on my face, for no one came near me, or spoke to me again; and as soon as the schoolars took their seats the teacher was called out. He requested them to stay notil ne returned, but was gene so long that we did not sing any more that n ght. I was surprised to find lather at the door waiting for me. He said Philip and sent for him, and he had stayed to go home

"I hope it will be, but it is a hard case. There, don't take on' I don't believe him guitty, but one man's belief er one man's word wou't do any good while there is another man to swear against what the other says. It is a hard case.

How my heart sank as he went on to tell me the whole horrible truth. It seems that Philip had that day offered a counterfest com to the toll gute Marian. keeper, which was marked, and had been describwas robbed. The gate keeper took the money, but sent an officer after I'hdip, who said he took the money from Mr. Bates in change for a bill he gays him to ray for a sent and in the money from Mr. Bates in change for a bill he him to pay for a singing book. Mr. Bates said he had given no change for books—those who bought hooks bought them in the church, and besides Philip had not got a hoek. This was unfortrue chough, for l'hillp had met him in the road, and paid him in advance for a hook, which the teacher was to send him. There were no witnesses, and it was indeed a hard

Sleep did not come to my pillow that night, nor the next, for the next day Mr. Barnard was takentto see Philip, and declared that to the best of his belief, he was the man who had robbed him. The cloud that hung over us all was growing darker; public feeling was against him. Almost every one was on his side at first, but now they wondered how he could be such a hypocrite. They inalited him in prison by professing to believe that there was a gang of rothers in the neighbor. hood, and urged him to turn "State's evidence." I believe he bore it all bravely, and like a Christien; but I did not. I had been taught to hide my feelings, but I fretted in secret. Father thought it was best I should continue to attend singing-school, and I did, though it cost me more sorrow than he knew of to sing all the evening, within a stone's throw of the juil, where he, who was my all in all" on earth, lay in trouble and dark-

'There's no knowing what might have happen ed, little girl, but you are not his wife nor sweet-heart," father said, "and there's no use in making people talk."

How heartily I wished that I were either, or anything to him-had any claim on biin that I might go to him, to comfort him, or mourn over him in the face of the world. I might send him messages by father, but what could I say to him I believed him innocent, but he knew that. So I crushed down my heart, and went to the singingschool just as I had done before.

Every night I heard the teacher and pupils talking over the robbery, but they were either very merciful to me or afraid, for they never mentioned The lips name in my hearing. One night father had some business in the village, so he went early and left me to wait at the hotel until the church was opened. When I entered the little sitting-room of the hotel, Mr. Barnard was lying on the sofa talking with a friend who sat near him had just taken off his cravat, and was showing his throat to his friend. I looked, too, and saw three greenish brown spots, two, near together, and one

"Odd," said his friend, carelessly. "It looks as if the hand that made those marks had lost the middle finger."

Then they went on talking on different subjects until a sleigh drove up to the door. It was Mr. Carrington Bates. Mr. Barnard's friend went out, and through the open door I saw the fine sleigh, with the light from the hall lanterns shining down oa the bear skin robes and gilded harness. Mr. Bates had a friend with him, a Mr. Congreve, who, he had promised, would visit the school, and sing for the scholars. I watched the two tall figures, muffled in furs, langhing and talking merrily with the landlord, and thought of dear Italian in prison. Mr. Raymend one dear Philip in prison. Mr. Barnard rose to shut the door, and then settled himself on the sofa for a nap. I turned to a book of bound magazinea that lay on the table, but I could not interest myself in them, for my eyes were continually turning to the little pale man on the sofa, whose words had worked so much misery for me. I heard, as in a dream, the door of the next

DAILY COURIER, knew his voice, though it was very unlike the ne he used in church; and such words!-min knew it was wrong for me to listen, but I coul not help it. I read, and looked at the engravings to make sure I was not dreaming. I walked about the floor, and rustled the papers on the table, to let them know the parlor was not empty; but they did not hear me. Mr. Barnard was sound asleep and breathing softly. If it had been any one else, I would have wakened him, for an inexresamble fear and loneliness came over me. I ut their horrible talk

"Bah!" I heard Mr. Bates say, with a laugh, I went 10 sec the old fool, and advised him to ut a meat poultice on his neck—the old whim-By Jove!" cried Mr. Congreve, admiringly, pie are all fools, so they pitched upon the biggest fool among then."

The church bell rang just then, and the two men, to my great relief, left the room. Their con versation had no meaning for me, but was simply disgusting and horrible; so much so that I could hardly bear to take my old seat in the church, when they two were standing before the pulpit. Thei faces were a little reddened, but they were hoti perfectly cool and gentlemanly. A glee class had been formed, and, at my father's request, I had joined it. Mr. Bates was to go around that night and try their voices separately, so that he migh class and seat them as he liked. I sat far back from the front, and dreaded his approach, not so much because I was afraid to sing alone, but be-cause I loathed him. I noticed, as he came up the gis'e, that he was about Philip's hight and size and I hated him for it. He came at last and leaner over the pew-door, so that I felt his hot breath or my cheek.

"Now, Marian, bird," said he, holding tue bow on the strings of his violu ready to accom-pany me. I was startled by his familiarity, and glanced scornfully up at him, and at the white hand which held the bow. The middle tinger of his right hand to the second joint, was goue! It lashed upon me. I did not sing. I sprang to m eet and seized his arm, while my voice rang shrill ed his arm, while my voice rang shrilly through the house.

"Robber! murderer! your hand, your hand!" llis face whitened, but he shook me off, a colly as he would a spider that had dropped of is sleeve, and, with a grasp that was in reality ike iron, but seemed gentle as a woman's, thrus me back into my seat. I struggled fiercely, au bricked out my charges against him, and my sor row for Philip, for my feelings had been too lo pent up and hidden to stop for anything now ome of the timid ones fled, and the curious gath ored about me. They almost sufficated me.

"She is mad, poor thing," said Mr. Bates, as I eaued hack in the pew, gasping for breath.

If he had let me alone—if they had not crowded about e so. I should have grown calm, but he kept uesi and talked to me, and about me, until it seemed should go mad in reality. When they brought leigh to the door to take me home, he got in too nd with his most devilish cunning, kept me in riect fever cliterior and hate all the way. It w easy enough then to cheat father Dean story, for he had never seen his quiet little Marian such a mood before. They added so much to my behavior in the hurch, and Mr. Bates was so respectful, and so melancholy about it, that every one took it for granted I was crazy; and the children in the streets called me "crazy Marian." I was not crazy, though may have seemed so, for I always talked of wha was uppermost it my mand, in the vain hopethat same one would believe me; and people said 'twas all for love, and 'twas a pity I should set my hear on such a bardened villian as Phillp Southey. It was for love, but it was also for justice, and what would have done for auv innocent son, suffering

Philip's trial was put off until the early fall.— The trial was a mockery; I say it in the tace of the world. Friendless, without money or influence, ne was kept in the jail of his native village, within hight and hearing of the places where his childshood was spent, was kept to plue and weary him-self out with hopeless wishes, while his enemies were getting stronger proof against him. The truth was bad enough—and may God forgive those who lied about him. He had, on the night of the robbery, traveled over that same road—and although father swore that he had called at his house at half past nice, that was nothing in his favor, as Mr. Barnard could not tell what time is the evening he was robbed, and the horse Philip rode was a very swift one. His case was hopeless be was tried and found guilty. In consideration of his youth, his previous good character, and hi repentance, he was only sentenced to ten years imprisonment, with hard labor. Only ten of his best years, and his whole life made miserable h the shame and degradation of the prison. Father said it was unjust-and some of them hinted that ie had helped secrete the money, which had neve In one week Philip was to be removed to the prison. I knew it was of no use to uppeal to father or any one else for the privilege of seeing him; so late in the evening I stole up to my little room, opened the drawer, and took from their many wrappings, my mother's gold boads. This was the one gold link that bound to me to that mother whom I could not remember. I waiter util lather and mother Hean were asleep, au hen stole out along the lonesome street, to allage. I hurried past the lighted stores and lices - the windows, where I could see such de phuipaes of boile-and past the church which lated, because I had there first seen Carringto Bates. Past all these, to the great dismal jail I found the jailer, and put my precious beads i his hands. I don't know what I said to him, bu he threw them back as though they had been a serpent and had bitten him, and took me along the cold stone corriders to the room where I found Philip. I thought I had come to comfort him, bu he was braver than I. All his wrongs could no break his soble spirit, nor bow it down so long a he could feel that he was innocent. He had fre "Why did not Philip come?" I asked. "Of ted at tirst for my sake, and because it was unjust; but he was resigned. There in that prison room I promised that, at he end of ten yours, if God spared both our lives would be his wife-that I would love and remem per him through all those ten years; and at the end, we would begin life together anew.

The jailer came for me, and he bade me "goo ve" cheerfully; but when I looked back in th loorway, he had covered his face with his ma scled hands. I fear his spirit was not so calm as his words. Five years of the ten had nearly passed away and I was working at a farmer's many miles away from my old home. Father and mother were both dead, and I was left alone in the world. We had almost starved on the little farm, and when it was sold and the debts were paid, there was just nothng coming to me. I did not care, for I was young and strong, and had something to work for. laid up all my little earnings, so that we, Phil and I, would have enough to take us away from that place, and make a beginning somewhere else. By some flaw in the deed, or quibbling of the lawyers, his little farm had gone back to its former owner, long before his trial, and now ran to com-mon. And the house, that was to have been our happy home, still stood four logs high, just as he

I grew faint and sick even now, when I think now I looked forward to the day when I could say the time is half gone, only five years more and Philip will be free!" Five years! Would Philip still love me? I looked in the glass, and noticed the sharp outlines of my face. Five years more, and the brown hair he praised would be streaked with silver.

I was sorry for his sake that I was not growin beautiful, that he might be proud of me, and say, "Look at her; she has trusted me when all the world thought me gnilty, and loved and cherished me through all my degradation." This did not trouble, me for I believed he could judge by my

Near the close of the fifth year, a letter was rought me, written in a strange hand, marked at my native village. It contained only

"If Marian Dean will be at the hotel in this vil lage, at noon, on the 10th of this month she wil hear something to her advantage. L. RANKIN, Postmaster."

What could it mean? What could be of advan age to me, but to hear good news from Philip t was a mystery, but people advised me to go on and as it was already the Stil, I had no time to and as it was already the Stil, I had no time to lose; so the next day I took the stage, and at the appointed hour entered the sitting room of the hotel, where the first trouble of my life began. What was my surprise on finding there Mr. Barnard. He caught both my hands in his, and said

"Miss Dean, I ask your forgiveness. On my no nor, I believe he was innocent." He sat down on the sofa; covered his face with his hands, and began to sob. I could not comprehend it. I felt as if I was in the same half-wake state as on that horrid night when he lay asleep on the same sofa. I stood before him without speaking, only trying to think. At length he looked up.

"I'll make all the reparation in my power," he said, beseechingly. "Don't look at me so; I tell you it was an awful mistake. You know they are nearly of a size, and—well I was frightened, and t was dark. I don't donbt but what you can tell he same story now, eh?" Was the man mad, or was I? I could not tell. "You'll come over to the jail and see him now, won't you?"

"See who?" I asked. "See who?" I asked.
"Carr. It is the strangest thing! Everybody thought him so respectable until he was caught in this last robbery, and he has boasted of so many orimes since he has found that he cannot escape, that I thought, perhapa—"
"Who is Carr?" I cried, for a light seemed breaking in upon me scattered about, offering a reward for his appre-I did not hear any more, for my mind was filled with one thought. Justice would be done at last, though we had waited so long for it. It was hard to believe it was so near, but I hardly trembled as I stood there, for I had schooled myself to be culm since the time when I spoiled Philip's last chance for liberty by my wildness. I believe Mr. Barnard thought I was not glad, for he looked at me

"You think you can tell the story right straight along, don't you?" he asked. "This running about, and jumping across a story don't do any good, and won't pass in law, you know."

I did not know anything about law, but I knew that I was resolved to help Philip, and that all the cinning of Carrington Bates should not balle me. After I had listened as patiently as I could to Mr. Barnard's story of the strange chance by which he had been detected, and how curious it was that should be taken here for trial, and every thing should happen so strangely, we went ove

How well I remembered the chill stillness of the stone corridors, and shuddered when the jaile opened for us the same door he opened for me th hast time Isaw Philip' But the loud, derisive laugh that greeted us put all thoughts of that time out of my mind. There sat Carrington Bates. Not the elegant and refined teacher of music, but reckless and hardened in appearance and words, the Carrington Bates I heard talking in the private parlo of the hotel.

"Have you come to fell me that I sent Philip outhey to prison?" he cried. "That's no news to he. But wasn't it well done, though?" He threw himself back and laughed, while Mr. Barnard looked at him as though borror

If they hadu't all been fools, though, he couldn't have done it; so I suppose I must thank them too. But you—the devi!! how like a little tigress you sprang at me! How I'd liked to have throttled you—and you played cavesdropper too, ch?"

Mr. Barnard walked to the door. "Ha! ha!" he cried after him, "you know how t feels, don't you? But what do you want here I want to repair a wrong I have done," replied

Mr. Barnard, with more courage than he had shown before. "You robbed me-" "I know that, old boy," he said, coolly, and began humming a tune which he had taught us in the pleasant old days, before a cloud hid may unshine.
I pitied the man, so hardened and fallen, so different from what he might have been, if he had not degraded the many good gilts which God gave him. He seemed perfectly conscious that his race was run, and gave up with a kind of reckless despair that was pitiful to see. "Little foo!" he said, scornfully, what are you ying for? OFFICE LOUISVILLE COURIER, FRIDAY August 26, 1859.

The market has assumed a more healthy tone in a epartments, especially for Produce and Grain; and diana, and Otio, as indicated by their late statement are greatly contracted in the item of circulation, an although we have now reached that period of the season when produce usually begins to move prefty freely, we learn that the Banks are Issuing their notes very slowly from the fact that shipments of grain to the sesboar are still comparatively light, and the bankers, having had enough of loaning money to enable parties to hole produce on speculation, are not disposed to grant an ather encouragement in this direction. The result is stocks remain chiefly in the hands of farmers, and abou as fast as the latter sell, the stuff goes off through th egular channels of trade-not renewed. The move nis in financial affairs are, in a word, guarded and ealtey, and the slm is to mainthin this position, rathe isn to risk expansion.

At a meeting subsequently held in this city, Fowlkes denounced Conwell as a rasea, and charged that he had made dishonorable propositions to him in 7 exas. This was not credited at the lime, but the Dr. was probably correct.

It was accertained yesterday that Mr. Oonwell had not visited his family, as he proposed, and nothing was known, up to last evening, as to the direction he look. Neither could anything be ascertained as to the habilities of the firm, owing to the unreliable condition of the books, but it is supposed there is but little, if anything, left for creditors.

ARRIVALS, August 26. Bowling Green, Leav; DEPARTURES. Superior, Cin; Ilickman, Mein;

Charm, Marble Hill: Tempest, Jno A Flsher, Nash: THE RIVER was falling vesterday, though slowly with four feet four inches water in the canal in the evening by the mark. During the previous twenty-four hours the river had receded two nches at the head of the falls, which was fully six inches at Portland. The weather in the morn-ing was lowering and sultry, but it cleared off and was pleasant throughout the day. At Pittsburg, yesterday, the river was still fall-ng, with but little over two feet water at Glass nouse. The river at this point was muddy, an usual indication of a rise, but it has not yet com-nenced swelling, and we hardly think it will uness more rain l'alls.

The Sam Kirkman having been detained, advertised for Cairo this evening. The Portsmouth, for Nashville, having letained, takes her departure for all Car erland river landings this evening. Capt. Lod-rick has chartered half the boat to Capt. Jas. . Russell, a clever, popular boatman. The Union, Capt. Liter, in full repair, is dvertised for Evansville and Green river this

Uncle Ike is expected at the wharf early his morning, en roufe for New Orlcans. The Cumberland river, at Nashville, Thursy evening, was at a stand, with three feet water

The Chatlanooga has at length ahandoned the trade between this port and Cairo, and at last accounts was plowing the turbid waters of the Mississippi. BALTIC ON FIRE - Yesterday morning the Baltic laid up at New Albany, caught fire in the black-smith schop, but the flames were checked be-fore much damage cosued. The Gen. Pike, from this port, was at Mein his yesterday, getting ready for a return trip. The Glenwood arrived from Pittsburg ves

The hull is extra strong, and well fastened, and was built by Eigherick Crowne, who have to was built by Eigherick Crowne, who have to was some y Richards & Browne, who have turned out au scellent job. Her draught light is only filteen schos, with capacity for 900 bales of cotton. The abin, a very neat one, can accommodate thirty assengers with berths. Her entire outfit, car-ets, cartains, oilcloths, sheetings, &c, all com-lete, was furnished by the new and enterprising house of Marshall & Dickinson, who have a ver extensive stock of steamboat furnishing goods. The hull of the Fleta is 11s feet in length, with 26 feet beam, and 4½ feet depth of hold. She is a side wheeler, with two engines, a doctor engine and steam capstan, all the machinery being made by Hawley, Billings & Co. She has two large 40 inch hollers, each is fect in length, with 4 flues. The cabin was built by Mr. Downes, and the furniture by John Simm. The boat was built un der the superintendance of Capt. Barnes, wh has secured au excellant one for the trade. H has secured an excenant one of the trade. Inis a very clever, courteous hoatman, and should

FREE NEGROES ON STEAMBOATS-THE LAW IN NEW Orleans.—As many of our boatmen are prepar-ug to hire their crews for the ensuing season in e southern trade, we repulish the late set of the suisiana Legislature in reference to the admission of free negroes into the State, particularly nto the port of New Orleans.

This law, as at present understood, is odious and njurious to steamboat interests, and it looks like it had been enacted for the especial benefit of the police, and the keeper of the caliboose. Can any one tell its meaning and intent? If it is strictly enforced, it will result in compelling southern boatmentto employ only white men and boys as stewards, waiters, cooks, cabin boys, firemen, &c., on their hoats. That would be not only extreme ly inconvenient, but a serious injury to many of the southern boats, as well as southern people generally, and it should be modified. It is universally complained of, and we have heard no one speak in favor of it: The act of our Legislabure, approved 15th March, 1859,

Introduces changes in the law as it existed before that date, and the law is now very stringent. By the first section of the act of 1850, any free person of color comto this State on board a steamer plying outside nits of the State is to be lodged in jail immediat the arrival of the steamer in fort, and is to remain till she isaves. This lodging in jull is to be done by the pelice authority.

The second section provides that the Captains may take any such persons out of jail by giving bond, with a penalty of five fundred dellars, conditioned that the sleamer will leave the post within twenty-four hours, and that the free person of color; hall not be allowed to allowed to jail, the master shall pay forty cents per day for day they shall have been in jall, and no other evely day they shall have been in jail, and no other charges.

The seventh section provides that the Harbor-masters of the port of New Orleans shall require from the master of any steamer plying without the State a written statement on oath of the number, name, and pisce of residence of every free person of color by him brought into the State on board of his vessel that trip; the master of the steamer is also bound, immediately on his arrival in New Orleans, to send to the office of the Chief of Police a like statement on oath, And in case such manter aegicts to furni him Harbor-masters with such statement when called upon, or neglects to transmit the same immediately on his arrival, to the office of the Chief of Police, he shall be condemned to pay a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars, recoverable with privilege on the steamer.

The ninth section provides that the act shall take effect from and after the 1st of September, 1839.

The other provisions of the act do not effect the vessels, and relate merely to free persons of color themselves. There is no mode of evading this law, and srict compliance is necessary. The fact that the act gives the informer one-half of the fines collected, and makes him a competent witness, will keep the police and others active.

The directors, we understand, meet again thi orning at their room in this city. They resolved, deed, at their last meeting, to assemble every Saturday bereafter, till the occurrence of the Fair. The prospect for a big show and a rousing rowd was never better than it is now. The reent rains have given an unnanally beautiful careting of green to the Fair Grounds, and improve nents are now under way which will add much o the convenience of exhibitors and the comfor f spectators. Ladies especially will find that undry little matters, hitherto thought of but never attended to, have been provided for them. which will render their visits to the Fair pleasant er than they have ever been before.

The side shows, within the enclosure, promibe much more numerous this season than they ave been upon any former occasion. Room for number of large tents has already been applied or, and we understand that North's unrivalled ircus will spread the entire rotundity of its wing pon a portion of the beautiful grounds.

The Fair itself will be more attractive than usua! because it has several new features, and offers by ar the largest premiums that the Association has et given.

The Nashville Railroad will doubtless bring cousands of spectators to this Fair, who have ever yet attended one of the South-Western exkiitions. "Come one! come all!"

TOADS, SNAKES, MOLES, BIRDS, AND SO ON. Here is a paragraph from the Ohio Farmer which we venture to commend to the serious at ention of our readers-especially of the young .-Ve have ourselves, on various occasions, evinced ne bardihood to say a word or two in behalf of the toad, the friend and assistant of the gardener; out we have not yet had the holdness, except in a very quiet way, to lift up our voice for that maigned, abused, despised, and nuiversally bated riend and assistant of the orchardist, the snake Yet we never kill a snake, and never see one killed without rebuking the perpetrator of the cruel and senseless deed. The snake is the cat of the orchard, just the same as the toad is the fly trap, and the beetle-trup, and borer-trap, and melon-hugrap of the garden: the one catching and devour ng young rabbits, that bark and damage trees and villaicous field-mice, that girale and destroy them-and the other living upon the insects that are so troublesome to vines and garden vegeta

Yet every man's hand is against the snake nd every child is permitted without rebuke to altreat and despice the poor toad. Both, in on dgment, are offenses against charity and good reeding. For the first, Iloly Writ is, in a neasure, responsible; for the other, Shakspeare The seed of the woman shall bruise the sc ent's head," is taken even to this day as I ense to ruthlessly huat out and destroy the snake wherever he may he found. Yet, with few exceptions, his whole tribe are harmless and he is certainly one of the most beautiful of rentiles, and the gracefulest of all So the toad which Shakspeare drew, "ngly; and venomous," has known through all his descendants nothing but the contempt of man and the abuse of chidren. Yet Shakspeare's sense of justice compelled him to admit that the toad "hath yet a precious iewel in his head." That jewel is not his eye, however, as the great bard of nature thought, but his ongue. And of this fact we present another pargraph in evidence, from the same source, be ow publish this pastoral charge: "Neither kill or a use toals any more?" . TOADS AND SQUASH-BOGS -A few weeks 820, ave an account of a bad trait in the character of rfriend the toad and will now relate a reduce iash vine, we saw him thrust out his tongu and capture a squash-bug-Coros tri tes. As the mell of this insect is anything but fragrent, we saturally thought the toad's conception of the creeable was d. Merent from ours. vine a leaf on which there were a e way in which he turned his head and looked in a few moments he gave a hop nearer the buz. Again and again this was repeated, unti one were left. The gourmand seemed to smark Thenever a bug would crawl to the top, the res of the toad would kindle and his whole for artake of the excitement. Then he was really andsome in our eyes, and we really wished that is race would give over eating bees, and take xclusively to bug; and other noxious insects. But the plea in behalf of snakes, which we now note, is mixed up with a good deal of sound bilosophizing, and is certainly worth the serious onsideration of men and women who wanterly lestroy animals and hirds for mere sport, which are among the best friends they have:

2. KILLING WILD ANIMALS .- A little altention to

he habits of the animals we encounter in the own and country, in the habitations of men, or in beswamps and torests, will often give us new ews of the relations that the lower animals beo man, and tench us that in many instances ou onceptions of what is useful or what is injuriou are not founded in truth, but only in the miscon-ception of a few facts. The plan of creation is perfect in all its details, but man sometimes steps and tries to make things better, without heir ossessed of the necessary amount of knowledge o qualify him for the work; when this is the case, e always fails. We must work in accordance with nature's laws, if we expect to be successful n illustration of this, the indiscriminate destruction of the rapacious animals—those that feed or thers-may be taken as an example; and the re ultis the rapid increase of the vegetable eater n which the former preved; and the consequer mplaint, that everything is eaten up by mice rats, bugs, caterpillars or worms. We oft war on our best friends, through mistake. ot plead for the lives of all rapacious animals, for hose whose natural food is appropriated by man, here is no further need, and their existence is to tim a positive evil. But it often happens that a lesh-eater appropriates to itself a little of what is claimed by all-grasping man as his own, and then out comes the gun, and the career of the poor annal is ended. It is all the same if for every stray chicken or duckling killed, a thousand rate or mice may have been destroyed—the good is for zotten, and only the evil remembered. species of hirds eat grain or fruit at certain sea-sons, while, during the rest of the year, inaects that make the same plants and many others their prey s the food of these very birds. Never mind the good these feathered friends have done, kill them If, for what business have they to eat our grain r fruits. But hold' do not be in too great a h can you shoot or poison all the mice, rats and sects that every year levy the heaviest kind of tax ou the produce of your land? Will they not go on increasing nutil they become a curse, in conseuence of the destruction, by you, of their natural es. Reflect a little and see if this is not the case. Are there any greater enemies to our field mice than snakes? do they not pursue mice, and after killing, swallow them entire? and yet every man and boy thinks he is doing a smart act by killing every snake he meets. All our snakes, with the exception of the rattlesnake and copperhead, are efectly harmless. They have no poison fangs, and oir teeth are small. But we could increase the list of really useful animals to a very great length and it would include many animals considered in jurious by many of our readers; but we will simply alvise all to study the habits of animals, disco-the nature of their food, and many new facts w

Henry Coggswell Knight, of Massachusetts-an centric man, but a man of genius, as his "Syhiline Leaves and Wayward Criticisms" abundantly proved-wrote, many years ago, "Rowley Woods," and other poems which ought still to be held in pleasant remembrance. But only students of American literature know anything about Knight; and very few, even of them, know anything about "Rowley Woods." All we remember of it onrselves, is its gentle tone and the following couplet:

"I never see a snake within the grass, But that I step aside, and let it pass. Henry Coggswell Knight was a philanthropist
